During our stops in various cities, we have blocks of “exploration time” off the train for participants to take in the sights/sounds/smells of a city they've never been in, and gaining independence in a limited way. Parents and caretakers can choose whether to allow their young person to have this time unsupervised by Hack Club staff, or they can remain as part of the supervised group. The cities we have scheduled “exploration time” in are New York, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.

The longest block of exploration time is 4 hours in New York and Los Angeles, and 8 hours in San Francisco, and would occur before our curfew. During that time all Hack Clubbers must remain in the city and be reachable by cell phone, however if you sign yes to the waiver they can choose how to spend their time.

Students with freedom waivers are still invited to join supervised activities, however they would have the additional benefits of choosing to join their fellow Hack Clubbers on excursions to restaurants, walks in the park, and other activities organized by passengers on board.
